Weekly Test Lesson 25

Read the passage. Then answer the questions.

A Trip to Zonar

Sada and Banu were talking while perched atop their favorite climbing wall at the park when suddenly something sparkling in the sunshine caught Sada's eye. Pointing out the object to her friend, she said, "Banu, what's that over there?"

Banu said, "I'm not sure, but let's check it out."

The girls carefully climbed down from the wall, approached the object, and then came to a halt next to it. Banu said, "Whoa! Dude, it looks like a crashed drone."

"It actually looks more like a cross between a helicopter and a drone," replied Sada.

Banu saw a door, carefully opened it, peered inside, and said, "Wow! It's spacious enough for us to fit inside. Look!" She crawled inside, and Sada spotted another door, opened it, and joined her. The girls sat in the two seats they found inside. Just as Sada leaned back in the seat, the doors closed and locked, and a robotic voice said, "Please buckle your seat belts."

The girls looked at each other with excitement and a little trepidation, and quickly followed the voice's directions. "Thank you. Your trip will begin shortly," said the voice.

Suddenly, the drone left the ground and skyrocketed the girls up into the clouds. Then the robotic voice said, "Preparing to leave Earth's atmosphere."

The girls looked at each other in shock. "I think we are going to space!" shouted Banu. "I am really frightened but also really excited."

After what seemed like a short trip, they felt the drone slow down, and the voice said, "Prepare for landing."

The drone made a perfect landing. Sada and Banu peered out the window and saw what looked like an airport with more drones like the one they were in parked on runways all around them. The doors slid open, and Sada and Banu climbed out of the drone. Banu suddenly grabbed Sada's arms and said in a barely audible voice, "I think aliens are walking toward us."

The girls stared as the group of aliens walked closer to them and then stopped. They looked like humans, except their skin was orange, they had purple stripes, and their hair was bright blue.

"Greetings, Earthlings," said one of the aliens. "Welcome to the planet Zonar. We are pleased that you chose to visit our planet."

The girls looked at each other in surprise and then looked back at the aliens. All Banu could say was, "Oh boy, this is nuts!"

"My name is Radion. What are your names?" asked an alien.

"I'm Sada, and this is Banu," said Sada.

"We have been expecting you," said Radion. "Would you like a tour of our home?"

The girls nodded their heads excitedly, as another alien brought what looked like a floating skateboard over to the girls. He gestured at the board, and the girls warily climbed aboard it, and before they could blink, they were in front of a large, round building. Other kids were zooming around on boards like the one the girls stood on. Radion explained that it was a school, and the students were getting ready for pod races. He took the girls behind the building to see the pods and the race track.

The next stop on the Zonar tour was a bean-shaped building. "This is one of our best feeding stations," said Radion.

The girls walked inside and were amazed by glass cases with all kinds of fruits, vegetables, meats, cheeses, and breads. Radion explained that they should pick some ingredients, and a robot chef would make them something special. "The chefs make original dishes for each person," explained Radion.

After the girls ate a delicious meal, Radion continued the tour by taking them to a high-rise building. "The fourth floor of this building is my home," he said.

Then Radion said, “Sadly, it is time for you to return home.”

Radion took the girls back to their drone, and Sada and Banu climbed inside and buckled their seat belts. They waved to Radion, the drone lifted into the Zonar sky, and soon, they were back on Earth.

The girls raced home and told their families about their amazing adventure. Their families seemed skeptical, but everyone ran back to the park to see if they could find the drone. When they arrived at the spot where the drone had landed, it was no longer there.

“Very funny, girls,” grumbled Sada’s dad.

Sada looked at Banu and said, “I know we both didn’t have the same dream, so it must have happened, right?”
