Weekly Test Lesson 15

Read the passage. Then answer the questions.

Keep Gym Class in Schools

In many schools, gym class has been removed from the school day. Some school leaders think gym class is not important. They believe students should spend more time on math, science, reading, and writing. These subjects are essential. However, students need gym class just as much as these other subjects. Removing gym class from the school day is not a good idea. Gym class improves learning, keeps students healthy, and teaches them to get along with others.

In gym class, students exercise. They also play games and move their bodies in different ways. Scientists have discovered that exercise improves learning. More blood is pumped to the brain when people exercise or move their bodies. This makes the brain healthier. A healthy brain helps students learn. The California Department of Education reported that children who exercise get better scores on tests in school. Scientists also found that 30 to 45 minutes of exercise five days a week improves students' memories and grades. They also discovered that students learn new things faster after exercising. Teachers have reported that students are able to remember more of what they read when they return from gym class.

Exercising and playing during gym class keeps students' bodies healthy. Gym class is a good way to help students stay at a healthy weight. Experts have found that students who exercise are sick less often than students who don't. Students' hearts beat faster when they run, jump rope, or even throw a ball. Doctors report that this makes the heart stronger. Exercise also makes our lungs work harder. This keeps them healthy. Exercise builds strong muscles and bones. A strong body is a healthy body.

Gym class helps students learn how to get along with others. Experts have found a link between exercise and happiness. They say students feel better after they exercise. They are also happier. Students are friendly and kind to each other when they feel good and are happy. Also, gym class gives students a time to play games with their friends. Playing games teaches them how to take turns and follow rules. It also teaches them to talk to each other to solve a problem. Students often play sports on teams in gym class. Students learn to work together to reach a goal when playing on a team.
