Crystal River Preserve State Park

Come and explore Crystal River Preserve State Park! It is one of the most beautiful places in Florida! The preserve occupies a 20-mile-long stretch of the Gulf of Mexico. It lies between temperate and subtropical climate zones. The sparkling waters of the Crystal River are located in this unique place. In addition, the park contains coastal marshes and forests. It also includes inlets, grass flats, islands, and still backwaters.

The Crystal River, one of the Outstanding Florida Waters, is known for the fascinating animals that live there: manatees. The manatee, an endangered species, looks like a cross between a walrus and an elephant. This mammal is also called a sea cow. In the past, it has been hunted for its bones, skin, and oil. Today, manatees are protected by laws that prevent these practices.

From mid-autumn to early spring, the largest herd of manatees in the United States comes to enjoy the warm, spring-fed river. A spring is a natural source of water that bubbles or flows up from underground. The springs that feed the Crystal River are at a constant, manatee-friendly temperature of 72 degrees. Visitors to the area can swim with the manatees and other river animals!

The preserve has a wide variety of animals and plants. Walkers can view about two hundred species of birds. These include anhingas, bald eagles, and wild turkeys. The anhinga is a waterbird with a curvy neck and a long, sharp bill. It is less waterproof than many other waterbirds are. It does not produce as much natural oil for its feathers. It has to stand with its wings open in the sun so it can warm up and dry off. Visitors to the preserve can also spot alligators, foxes, terrapins, dolphins, and deer. Plant life includes tall sawgrass (watch out for those tiny teeth!), longleaf pines, mangrove trees, palm trees, and cordgrass.

Many types of butterflies also stop in Crystal River Preserve State Park. The zebra butterfly's official name is Heliconius charithonia. It is common mostly in the states on the Gulf Coast, where it lives year-round. Even though this butterfly has yellow stripes instead of white ones, it still looks like a zebra. The wingspan of a zebra butterfly is about three or four inches. These insects are busy during the day. They rest in big groups at night. They also eat flowers that make their bodies poisonous. This helps them stay safe from predators.

The preserve is a good place to see a special kind of limestone. It is called karst. This type of rock is common in places with caves, sinkholes, and springs. It is gray and filled with holes of many different sizes. Karst formations can look like towers or jagged teeth.

There are many activities to keep park visitors busy at Crystal River. The most popular activities are hiking on nature trails and birdwatching. Visitors can also enjoy biking, fishing, kayaking, canoeing, and taking guided boat tours. Guests can stop in at the visitor center. There, they can find useful information about the preserve, its habitats, and its wildlife, including exhibits on snakes and diamondback terrapins.

As long as it is protected, Crystal River Preserve State Park will always be a place of beauty.
